SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 10
Lecturer: Lisa Kogen

OUTSIDER/INSIDER:
Jewish Angst, Jewish Genius
and American Popular Culture

From Tin Pan Alley in New York to the “hungry i” in San Francisco, Jewish immigrants and their children were at the vanguard of popular music, theater, cinema, television and comedy. What accounts for this? In looking at the works of such disparate personalities as Al Jolson and George Gershwin, The Three Stooges, Leonard Bernstein, Harvey Kurtzman of Mad Magazine and Woody Allen, this lecture will focus on the complex intersections of ethnicity and identity.

LISA KOGEN is a doctoral candidate in Jewish history at JTS and has lectured extensively in both formal and informal educational venues. She is the National Education Director at the Women’s League for Conservative Judaism.

THE TEXTS
WE LOVE
TO QUOTE
TUESDAYS,
FEBRUARY 12, 19;
MARCH 4 6:30 P.M.

In this three-week "mini-mester" Rabbi Howard J. Goldsmith will explore some of the texts we quote the most. How did the Rabbis of old understand these texts?

Do we use them today in ways consistent with Judaism's traditional understanding of them? How much room do we have to take quotations from the Bible out of context? How can we reclaim traditional texts to make them relevant for our modern world?

This course is appropriate both for those with years of text study and those just beginning.

“[Heschel's] question was, 'What would Isaiah do if he were alive today?' And his answer was [that] Isaiah would not focus on trying to save the Jewish people. Isaiah would focus on trying to save the world, would address the issues that were roiling America at large.”

— RABBI NEIL GILLMAN,
from his lecture “Are Jews Responsible for the Whole World?”
on January 23, 2008, at the Ivan M. Stettenheim Library

Listen to the full pod cast on the Emanu-El Web site. Click “Learning: Adult Education: Emanu-El Reads.”

EDUCATING OUR CHILDREN:
